Coolidge
Is Alive
to His Responsibilities

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE was engaged today in formulating his policy to protect the public against a coal shortage this winter, according to the United Press.

The keynote of that policy, according to his advisers, is:

"There shall be no strike." That Mr. Coolidge is alive to the grave situation in the hard coal fields as a result of the deadlock between operators and miners was evidenced by his sending Geo. Otis Smith of the United States coal commission on a flying trip to Gloucester, Mass., to confer with Chairman James Hammond.

THE president has pledged himself to carry out the policy of economy in government laid down by the late President Harding and Mr. Coolidge was understood to have instructed General Lord, director of the budget, to inform all departments and bureau heads that estimates for the new budget must be cut to the bone. Speaker Gillett of the house, also called. George Christian, former presidential secretary, was in his office winding up affairs and assisting the new president in getting in touch with all details of the administrative machinery.

GRADUATE NURSES ADDRESSED BY ELDER QUINN

Seniors of Glendale Sanitarium Hear Message of Healing

Seniors of the graduating class of nurses of the Glendale sanitarium held the place of honor at the service held at the Sabbath evening services of the Seventh Day Adventist church Saturday night when a special address was delivered by Elder R. D. Quinn. The church was packed with the nurses and their friends and a very fine program was presented which included besides the address:

Processional—"March Triumphal" (Morrison), played by Mrs. A. Belle Johnson, pianist, and Mrs. Charles E. Swartsager, organist. Anthem by the choir—"Fear Not, O Israel," with C. H. Jones directing.

Invocation—Pastor R. W. Parmelee. Baritone solo—"O Divine Redeemer" (Gounod), J. Elwood Moore.

Hymn—By the congregation. Benediction—Chaplain R. D. Munson.

The class has been considerably feted during the past week, having been entertained at the home of Dr. Lydia Parmelee, on East California street and on Sunday night at the home of Miss Mary Martin on East Lomita, and also entertained by the juniors.

Tuesday the annual picnic of the Alumni association will be held at Long Beach and the graduates will be initiated into membership. At the picnic talks will be made by Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard who have just returned after ten years' service as missionaries in China to enjoy a furlough in the United States; also talks by Dr. and Mrs. Fred West who are home from the Mexican mission field.

Legion Auxiliary President Attends County Council Meet

Mrs. Margaret Kaeding, president of the American Legion auxiliary of Post No. 127 of Glendale, attended the caucus of the ninth and tenth districts of the county council of American Legion auxiliaries held Saturday at Long Beach. Some very important matters were discussed relative to the work to be taken up at the state convention at Eureka the last of the month. The ninth and tenth districts unanimously endorsed standing behind the eighteenth amendment solidly and that is one of the big things that will be brought to the attention of the other districts at the state convention.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC DEPOT PLANS ARE ENLARGED BY RAILROAD COMMISSION

Road to Prepare Station to Accommodate Passengers and Freight From Many Cities of the Valley, It Is Explained

BIG SAVING OF TIME WILL BE EFFECTED

Railroad Expected to Begin Work at Once on the Right-of-way at Cerritos Street With Every Bar Removed

The plans for the new Southern Pacific station in Glendale, which were approved by the state railroad commission, call for a considerably larger depot than that proposed by the company, according to a statement received by the Glendale Daily Press from the state railroad commission this morning.

This enlargement was ordered by the commission when it was determined that this station will in the future probably accommodate a larger number of passengers than heretofore, who would reach it from the western part of

Los Angeles, Burbank, Glendale, Eagle Rock section and Pasadena. On its completion the proposed depot, which will cost approximately $50,000, including the construction of new tracks and passenger platforms, will care for the freight as well as the passenger traffic of the sections named, thereby relieving the Los Angeles station to a considerable extent along these lines.

A paragraph from the railroad commission's bulletin reads: "This station replaces the existing station and is to be located about half way between Los Feliz and Glendale boulevard. It is understood that the city of Glendale will provide a street to approach the station from the north."

The exact time for the beginning of work on this depot has not been ascertained, but it is known that it will be commenced within a short time. For a long time the Southern Pacific company was held up by the controversy that prevailed in Glendale as to where the depot would be located. Some wanted it placed at the foot of Mulhalla street, where the company originally intended to place it, while others thought it should be nearer to Brand and wanted it placed at the foot of Cerritos, two lots to be opened from Gardena to the Southern Pacific right of way. The city council decided to place it at Cerritos and the two lots were purchased, $5500 being paid by the city and $6000 by private interests.

It is declared that for residents of the northwest part of Los Angeles, Hollywood, Pasadena, Eagle Rock and the San Fernando valley, boarding the train at Glendale will save about an hour and a half over going into the Arcade depot in Los Angeles. With the construction of the new station as proposed, practically all the steam line traffic from these sections bound for and arriving from the northern part of the state will doubtless pass through the Glendale station.

After the lunch was settled, two rival baseball teams, one headed by Sciot Kiefer and the other by Sciot Carlock met on the diamond and if the game had not been stopped by two "amateur teams" already scheduled on the diamond, it is quite possible the Sciots' teams would have been playing yet had not darkness intervened.

A large program of races was scheduled for the afternoon, for which valuable prizes were donated by Sciot Whitaker, Newton, Gibbren, Gregg, Carlock and Lewis Jewelry Co., and were awarded as follows:

Boys under 10 years—won by Irwin Palmer.
Boys over 10 and under 16—won by Clon Palmer.

Girls over 10 and under 16—won by Dorothy Leash.
Married women's race, won by Mrs. Howard.

Spoon and olive race—won by Mrs. Carlock.

Boys under 35 years—won by Sciot Lewis.
Boys over 35 years—won by Sciot Thompson.
Free-for-all—won by Sciot Murdy.

Back to back race, won by Sciot Thomas and Whitaker.
There was a tug-of-war between the ladies, which was won by Mrs. Warner's team.

The tug-of-war between the Sciots was bitterly contested and was finally won by Sciot Jellison's heavy weights.

Baby contest, won by Mrs. Howard's baby.

Feature, barefoot race—Murdy and Lewis.
A great deal of fun was occasioned by the above schedule of events. The entertainment arrangements for the picnic were in charge of Sciot Warren L. Newton, to whom the credit for the success of the picnic is due.

FEDERAL BANK IS GREETED WITH FLORAL TOKENS

More Than One Thousand Blossoms Given Away at Saturday's Opening

Over a thousand flowers were distributed at the opening of the new Federal Commercial and Savings bank at Brand and Wilson on Saturday. A profusion of flowers and other gifts filled the bank on Saturday, expressing the good wishes of merchants, other banks and friends. Among the many congratulatory offerings was a big box of peaches from W. H. Joplin, 116 Camulos. These will be distributed Sunday morning by the officers of the bank to the hospitals and churches.

Instead of a floral gift, Henry Brown and company furnished the punch which was served to all visitors.

Within the next thirty days, an announcement will be made of the date upon which the public will be invited in to inspect the completed building. The new Federal Commercial and Savings bank will be provided with a burglar-proof system on the market, installed by the Burgess Protection company, and will be one of the largest and best in the city when complete.

Workmen are hurrying the decorations for the opening inspection opening. May and Hellman, general contractors, have had charge of all alterations and installation of the fixtures. The electric signs and fans came from the Newton Electric company. All other equipment came from the Glendale Electric company. The fixtures in the banking room are mahogany, marble-faced.

The movement of the bank desires to thank all those who made such a successful business opening possible, the merchants and business men who lent their assistance and the many friends who came to wish their support and best wishes.

The following firms and individuals were represented among the flowers and gifts, and to each one the officers of the bank wish to express their appreciation: Alvin H. Frank and company, Jensen's Egyptian Village, the Irish Linen store, the Glendale Credit association, the Rotary club, the Newton Electric company, H. S. Webb and company, Rhoades and Smith, Blair and company, Sweetzer Baldwin, and F. A. Love. These banks also sent flowers. First National Pacific-Southwest, Brand Boulevard branch, and Glendale Avenue branch; Glendale State bank, the Hellman National City and Continental National banks of Los Angeles.

POLICE PICK UP RUNAWAYS FROM BAKERSFIELD

Lieut. Nunn Finds Youths in Truck Stolen From Father

Clinton Gunter, aged 16 years, and Henry Douglas, aged 14, both of Bakersfield, were picked up by Lieut. Nunn on San Fernando road at 12:30 o'clock Saturday night. Investigation proved, according to the police, that the Maxwell truck driven by the boys belonged to the father of Douglas and that they had run away with it. In the machine was a quantity of canned fruit, a bicycle, a case of tools, some bedding, and other articles.

The boys were taken to the police station where, police state, they told various stories of who they were and how they happened to be driving the truck in Glendale, but a real clew to their identity was not secured until Desk Sergeant Cole noticed several pencils in the pocket of the Douglas boy. On the pencils was printed the words "Douglas Garage, Bakersfield."

Feeling sure that this was a clew to the true facts Sergeant Cole wired the chief of police of Bakersfield, who ran the case down.

T. H. Douglas, father of Henry called at the Glendale police headquarters Sunday afternoon and the whole outfit, including the two boys, was taken home.

GLENDALE WALLOPS HOFFMANS

Before Large Crowd Local Team Plays Fast Ball Game

THE SCORE IS 7 TO 3

Visitors Gave One Thrill in the Eighth Inning

Before a large crowd, the Glendale team handed the Paul G. Hoffman company team a neat trimming in a fast, thrilling contest yesterday at the home field. The final score was 7 to 3. The Glendale team displayed a wonderful brand of baseball throughout the contest, but got a little scare in the eighth inning when the score was 4 to 0 in Glendale's favor, the Hoffman team bunched hits which netted them their lone three runs.

But that is as far as they could go with the puzzling slants of Slim Harris, who was sure doing his stuff on the mound. He allowed them only four hits and put 9 out of the way by the strikeout route.

He pitched no-hit ball up to the sixth inning when they got one hit. Nothing more was done until the eighth inning when they nicked him for three hits and as many runs, making the score 4 to 3. Glendale then in their half of the eighth scored up the game, scoring three runs more. "Pep" Kevin, the new Glendale catcher, made a big hit with the fans by his brilliant work behind the bat and none of them are wondering why they call him Pep.

Wilson, the hard working short stop, played a big game, handling three hard chances without a miss, and doing some real stick work. The fans were also pleased to see Sam Bell, last year's star first baseman, back in the lineup in his old position. With Pop Kerner behind the bat and Sam Bell back again it seemed to make a real machine out of the whole Glendale team with every part working great.

Miss Nina Belle Hurst, the lady umpire, took all the baulin' out of growls, knucks, etc., like any man umpire and got along very nicely.

MRS. PENDROY IS BACK FROM THE EASTERN TRIP

Finds Business Revival Indicated on the Atlantic

Mrs. Earl Pendroy, who returned the latter part of last week from a buying trip to New York, says it seems good indeed to be back in Glendale, although she had a very comfortable and pleasant journey, except for heat in Kansas.

She found business conditions in New York excellent, indicating a genuine revival of trade on that coast, but her report of the middle west is not so optimistic, because of the low price of wheat and depression in oil.

Wherever she went she heard talk of California and everybody wanting to come.

Two weeks were spent in New York and buying was never so perplexing, she says, because of the marked contrast in modes. Dress-makers seem to be trying to introduce what is termed "the crinoline skirt," otherwise the full skirt, and of course that calls for the basque, that always goes with it, but it was the judgment of most shoppers that this would not find general favor with the emancipated American woman after enjoying the comfort of the narrower skirt. All the musical comedies were showing them, however.

The bulk of her purchases were of the contrasting mode of gowns on long straight lines which compromise with an irregularly shaped flounce at the bottom, some of them coming up the side to form a sort of apron effect. Others have circular flounces that run to the waist line. Of the coats, Mrs. Pendroy said:

"The newest thing in the coat line is the sport coat trimmed with fur. Never have I seen so much fur-trimmed wearing apparel as this year. All the coats have fur collars. And as usual when furs are in vogue, ostrich plumes are lavishly used on the hats, which are elaborately trimmed and with a great deal of hand work expended upon them in the way of embroidery in wool, chenille and silk, and some of them hand-painted. As usual, the small hat is the favorite for street wear, and the large hat for dress occasions."

"Brown seems to be the leading color, covering a wide range, from tan through the wood shades and into nigger brown. French blue, a deep, vivid shade on the road to purple, is also being featured, though it is trying and therefore hard to wear. It will not be as popular as brown. The standard shades of blue and black that are always worn are of course to be found in all materials."

"The smartest coats are cut in long straight lines with tight sleeves, but there are also plenty of coats with big sleeves."

"Sport clothes are very smart and are going to be more popular than ever. Women have taken to them and decided they are what they want. This is especially true of western women, and I laid in a stock of very pretty things."

"Inside of three months I expect to have to go east again for more purchases. Our summer trade has so far exceeded our expectations that it is certain the fall buying will be so heavy as to require renewals of the garments we can get only in New York."

Mrs. Joe Steikeshner and baby daughter, Dorothy Jane, of Newton, Kan., accompanied Mrs. Earl Pendroy on her return from her eastern tour last week and will be her guests possibly until Christmas.

BUS TRANSPORTATION PERMIT APPLICATIONS CONSIDERED TOMORROW

To Be Taken Up at Adjourned Meeting on Tuesday Evening at the City Hall at 7 o'Clock

THOSE INTERESTED ARE INVITED TO ATTEND

Problem Before the City Likely to Be Settled by Discussion of the Applications in Public

An adjourned meeting of the Glendale city council to consider the applications for permits to operate local bus transportation systems will be held in the city hall Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

Two applications, one from the Pacific Electric company and the other from the Verdugo Hills Transportation company, were received at last Thursday's meeting of the council. As there was not sufficient time that evening to take up these applications and to give them intelligent consideration it was decided to give a whole evening to this subject.

All those interested in this transportation question are invited to be present at this session.

The transportation question has been before the Glendale council for months. Several months ago a permit was granted to C. G. Gulick to operate a bus line here. He was given 90 days to have his system in operation. That time limit has expired. The Pacific Electric company has wanted to extend its lines here for some time, but the extensions suggested up to this time were not nearly so elaborate as those contained in the application from that company that is now before the council.

Two weeks were spent in New York and buying was never so perplexing, she says, because of the marked contrast in modes. Dress-makers seem to be trying to introduce what is termed "the crinoline skirt," otherwise the full skirt, and of course that calls for the basque, that always goes with it, but it was the judgment of most shoppers that this would not find general favor with the emancipated American woman after enjoying the comfort of the narrower skirt. All the musical comedies were showing them, however.

A search was instituted by the local police and Officers Nunn and Hedrick located the missing machine on Magnolia near Brand at 1:30 o'clock.

Another car, belonging to A. A. Davis, 1132 North Elm avenue, was taken from Brand and Broadway last Sunday evening. Up to this time the machine has not been located.

The home of Charles V. Decker, 558 West California, was entered and robbed early Sunday evening. Captain Lovell and Officer Blake are investigating this case.

Mrs. Cloud, 608 West Elk, reported to the police at 11:05 o'clock Saturday night that someone had broken into her home and stolen a number of articles. Entrance to his home was gained by removing a screen and climbing through a side window. Officers Nunn and Hedrick were detailed to investigate this case.

The cash drawer of the business establishment of Mrs. Webster, 1413 South San Fernando was broken open and robbed of between $25 and $30, early Sunday night, according to the police department. Officer Kerns has been detailed to this case.

MERCHANTS ASK STORES CLOSE ON WEDNESDAY

The Merchants' association at its noon luncheon today at the Glen Inn voted unanimously to close at noon Wednesday, August 15 for the Merchants' picnic to be held at the Haddock-Nibley park formerly the Verdugo city park. TAFT MAN HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

William I. Bates of the Fox hotel, Taft, was slightly injured when the car he was driving ran into a pole on South San Fernando road at 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning, according to police records. DOG DIES OF A BROKEN HEART

PORTLAND, Oregon, Aug. 13 (United Press).—Here lies Jiggs, most faithful of dogs, who died of a broken heart.

So reads the inscription in the little graveyard of the Oregon Humane society, written on a rude cross, which marks the burial place of "Bluebeard" Poole's English bulldog. Poole was a bootlegger. He was caught and sentenced to a long term in the county jail. Separated from the master he loved, Jiggs soon lost interest in life, refusing to eat.

The dog was turned over to the care of Mrs. F. W. Swanton, of the State Humane society. She tempted Jiggs with every morsel in the canine cupboard of delicacies, but to no avail.

Finally, she took the faithful animal to his master's jail. They had a wonderful reunion for a few moments and Poole told Jiggs to go back, eat and wait for him and Jiggs tried. He swallowed food but it was not sweet and every mouthful was forced.

The other morning Jiggs was found dead. Grief for his master, nothing else, caused it, Mrs. Swanton said. And she knows, for she knows animals, and loves them. Jiggs' fidelity holds a lesson for human kind, she feels, with the spell of the wistful-eyed dog and his mournful cry for his master still upon her.

UNION LINO TYPE SCHOOL TO BE OPENED

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 13.—Plans for relieving future shortages of linotype operators through development of an educational program and records of steps already taken in that direction by the International Typographical Union will be revealed in the report of Charles P. Howard, president of the union, at the international convention to be held in Atlanta, Ga., August 13 to 18, according to an announcement made at the union's headquarters here.

The undertaking of the union is looked upon as important because of its bearing on the handling of similar problems in other trades, and because the education of apprentices in the printing craft has for many years been subject to controversy between the union and employing printers.

Units of a linotype school have been installed in a number of cities in cooperation with subordinate unions and it is planned to work toward the establishment of one large central institution, the report of the president says. One purpose of the project is said to be the transformation of the surplus of union printers, made idle by the increased use of machines, into machinist-operators, and another is to reduce the number of members out of employment in the 44-hour week strike by equipping them for linotype jobs.

"Contrary to the charges frequently made, the union is interested in fostering a shortage of printers to strengthen its position, we really desire to see the industry well supplied with help," said Mr. Howard. "In evidence of that statement we need only point to the chief reform the union has attempted in recent years—the struggle for the shorter work day. Quite obviously, the shorter work day is only possible when sufficient help is available."

The Typographical Union has maintained a correspondence course for apprentices for a number of years, and, according to Mr. Howard, the work of that institution has been very satisfactory; it is desired, however, to extend the scope of the educational program and to hasten results.

"We hope to dispose of the employers' complaint that the union, by alleged hostility toward trade schools, has contributed toward the shortage of machine operators in some sections," said Mr. Howard. "The laws of the union on apprenticeship are based on recognition of the fact that the printing business is a trade, and that the young men who can afford to pay for education will not spend years learning a manual trade, but will direct their efforts toward learning a profession. That is the real reason why the Typographical Union feels called upon to devote time and money to the task of educating apprentices."

The report of the president shows that 3,118 members remained on strike May 30 in the contest for the 44-hour-week in commercial printing shops, as against 7,050 in June, 1922. Receipts from the union's strike assessment in the two years affected amounted to $15,064,022.33, while disbursements reached a total of $14,117,129.43. The strike is still in progress in only a few important jurisdictions, including 91 cities. The number of printers engaged in local strikes against newspapers was reported as unusually small.

"Viewed entirely from the standpoint of money expended, some may honestly question whether the 44-hour struggle is worth what it has cost," the report says. "However, the question of reduced working times goes far deeper than the mere question of added hours away from the case and machine. It is the only method thus far developed by which the printer can take for his own enjoyment a portion of the increased production from natural development of skill and machinery. It not only means greater purchasing power for the printer, but it offers the opportunity for health, mental and moral development and added years of life, but is essential to the progress of civilization."

Post-war psychology is blamed by President Howard for many of the disputes in local trade jurisdictions within the last year, although the fluctuations in the purchasing power of the dollar, changes in living standards, and abnormal profits, in some establishments, are seen as contributing causes.

CARTER BOYS HOLD PICNIC AT LAS TURAS

Combined Forces of Glendale Press and Beach Boys Have Good Time

On the shores of beautiful Las Turas lake the combined organizations of the Glendale Press, Santa Monica Outlook, Ocean Park Bulletin and the Boy Scouts of Troop 8, spent a long-remembered Sunday afternoon, the courtesy of Mr. Davenport, president of the Las Turas lake club. The boys were transported on fast moving cars to the scene of activities, where they played a baseball game, ran races, swam in bathing suits before the steady and unrelenting turn of Mr. McGinnis' arm. International News Service film representative, who recorded their moves and actions which are to be witnessed soon by the parents and boys of the respective towns at their local theaters and in Glendale at the T. D. & L. theater, where Mr. Albright, the manager, welcomes them.

The Henry Brown Beverage company and Sid W. Brown of Glendale, made the boys long friends and enthusiastic drinkers of Sierra Club and Green Hill products. Were it not for the courtesy of these two gentlemen, Mr. Davenport would today have noticed a change in the contour of his lake. As it was the lake and the day was saved by the boys, being able to amply quench their thirst.

J. Samallow of the West cafe, from whom the sandwiches were obtained, overcame the pains of hunger in every degree and fast which also came from Glendale, filled any crevice that might have remained in the innermost recesses of a carrier boy's stomach.

Glendale carriers decisively proved that they excelled in sports by defeating troop 8 to the tune of 10 to 2. The tired but happy crew pulled into the Press office at 8:30, where anxious parents eagerly awaited and ably identified their missing sons.

Watch for the announcement when this film will be run at the T. D. & L.

IBANEZ' "ENEMIES OF WOMEN" AT THE GATEWAY THEATER

"Enemies of Women," Cosmopolitan Corporation's gigantic production of the Ibanez story, which is at the Gateway theater, proved a happy hunting ground for the scenic artist Joseph Urban. It is full to the brim with atmosphere. Mr. Urban revels in stories that hold atmosphere, for it is his task at the Cosmopolitan's studios to re-create for the camera's devouring eye the particular scenic atmosphere of the story being prepared. Coming to the screen with his rare gifts, Mr. Urban has set up a higher, more imaginative type of picture setting than the films had ever known before.

The artist's favorite setting of his many in "Enemies of Women" is the boudoir of Alicia, Duchess De Lillie, the role played by Alma Rubens. It is done in grey, striped in silver, for colors photograph, of course. The walls hold intriguing niches for bits of rare statuary, a dressing table set in a half-circled enclosure, raised two steps from the remainder of the room, is exquisitely done in silver and silk, crystal bottles and the myriad of exquisite details of an exotic woman. The seats are soft masses of cushions, and a triple chiffon curtain, hanging from ceiling to floor, swings half way across the room to insure absolute privacy to the dressing table. In the center of the room is a bright blue fountain, figure in blue ceramic rearing itself from the center of the water; oldish either around in the fountain. It is a room exalting the personality of an utterly exotic and extravagant woman.

Post-war psychology is blamed by President Howard for many of the disputes in local trade jurisdictions within the last year, although the fluctuations in the purchasing power of the dollar, changes in living standards, and abnormal profits, in some establishments, are seen as contributing causes.

"That can't be my old suit" — but the dry cleaner who uses DeLaval Continuous Clarification can work wonders

Imagine the difference that an ounce or two of dirt will make in the color of a suit or dress. That is the average amount taken from each garment we handle by our improved method of dry cleaning. No wonder that customers sometimes cannot believe their eyes when clothing is returned to them with its original color restored.

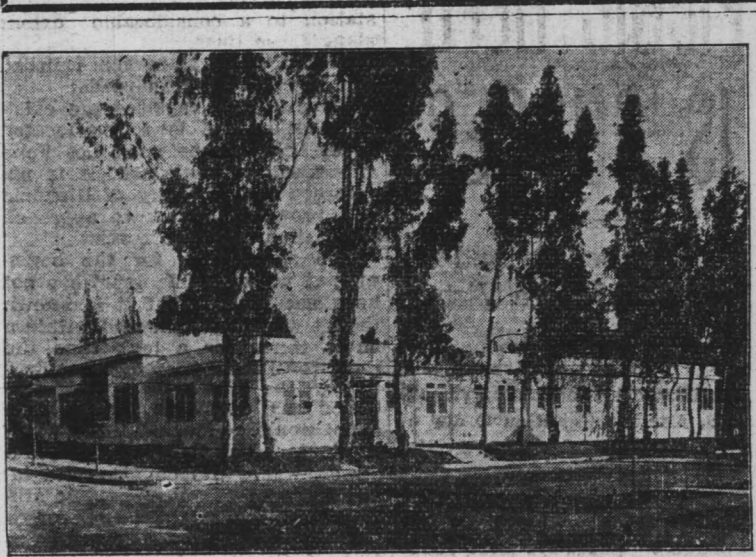

This dirt cannot be removed by brushing because it is firmly embedded in the cloth. Here it not only hides the original color of the fabric, but the gritty parts of it cut the threads and materially shorten the life of the garment.

NEVER SEES A REAL COW

A street urchin of the tenement districts in New York never sees a cow, but his brother in the remote rural sections has never seen a railroad train, so what one misses the other gains in both cases. The American Child Health Association, of which Herbert Hoover is president, points this out to show the varying environment under which the American youth lives. The underlying motive of the illustration, however, according to Courtenay Dinwiddie, general executive of the association, is to show that though their surroundings and contacts are different, both the city and the country boy will be brought up with the same end in view, namely, with health consideration paramount.

The association's nation-wide corps of experts, dealing with the health of children, he says, will blend the proper amount and variety of health education with other conditions as they relate to environment and as they pertain both to the city and the country youth. That the work of the association is reaching out to every remote corner of the country is seen in a letter from Mrs. Clarence Young of the little town of Burns, Ore., 30 miles from a road and which boasts only slightly more than one thousand population. The letter also gives a good picture of the environment in which the youths of that country are brought up. They have plenty of fresh air and sunshine, but there is no piped water supply nor sewage system. This is in contrast to city youths, whose only view of sunlight, too often, is the thin shaft that occasionally shoots down through an opening in the elevated structure.

Mrs. Young writes that a Mothers' club has been formed looking toward the health of the children of Burns, and says that the literature and other health teaching of the American Child Health association has already been widely distributed throughout the town.

LEGION NEWS

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat theocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.—Preamble to the Constitution of the American Legion.

Glendale post, No. 127, American Legion, is again glad to call the attention of the students of Glendale schools to a feature of its National Americanism Commission program. Extending from May 25 to October 12, 1923, an essay contest is on. The question for consideration is "Why America Should Prohibit Immigration for Five Years." Following are prizes to be awarded and rules governing the contest:

National, first prize, $750; second, $500; third, $250. State, first prize, silver medal; second, bronze medal; third, a certificate of merit issued by national headquarters of the Legion. The cash prizes are to be used only towards scholarships in colleges designated by the winners.

All girls and boys between the ages of 12 and 18 inclusive are eligible to enter the contest. Only one essay may be submitted by each person. The essays are not to be over 500 words in length. Only one side of paper should be used. A margin of one inch must be allowed on either side of the paper. After the essay is completed, the paper should be neatly folded, not rolled. Spelling, penmanship and neatness will be considered in judging the winner. Age will also be given full consideration.

This being vacation time the students of Glendale have the opportunity of giving this contest due consideration. The following statement is made by Chalmers D. Day, Jr., commander of Glendale post of the Legion, in connection with the contest:

"The subject for this contest is a truly great and important one, and who knows but that an essay written by one of the Glendale students may influence in the choosing of proper immigration legislation. We know that a change in our immigration system must be made, for the one operating at present is not consistent with proper Americanization, and it is fair to come to our shores and endeavor to come to our shores. The name of Glendale post, No. 127, its commander most earnestly urges every eligible Glendale student to be a contestant. In doing so you will be doing your nation, your America, a real service."

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—American Legion members, their families and friends counting on attending the annual national convention of the organization here next October, can obtain prompt and systematic attention to their reservations for hotel accommodations by dealing direct through their posts and auxiliary units, with Legion Department Adjutant Morgan Keaton, room 457, city hall, San Francisco. This arrangement has been made to prevent confusion and misunderstandings and was confirmed at a recent conference between Lemuel Bolles, Legion national adjutant and convention officials. Requests for reservations sent to the convention committee will not be honored but will be sent to the department adjutant.

All state adjutants have been provided with complete data as to rates for all of the principal hotels in San Francisco. All delegates, alternates and guests will be housed in downtown hotels and other legionnaires will receive similar accommodations, as far as possible. More than 150,000 visitors are expected for the convention.

Major General Charles G. Morton, commander of the Ninth Corps area, issued orders to the effect that the army will be represented at all state conventions held in the corps area by the American Legion, as well as the national convention in San Francisco.

IRISH FLAPPER AT THE GLENDALE

"Paddy—the Next—Best—Thing," Gertrude Page's famous stage play and novel, which supplies an exceptionally strong photoplay vehicle for Mae Marsh in the title role of a recently completed London and Ireland screen production, which comes to the Glendale theater today under release by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, has an interesting history with a singular American slant.

The book, which sold in England and America in the hundreds of thousands, was dramatized and presented at the Savoy theater, London, where it quickly became known as "The play for Americans." There actually were two outstanding reasons for this characterization of the play. One was that Peggy O'Neill, an American actress, had the title role in the stage adaptation of "Paddy." The other was that the Savoy theater, which adjoins the Savoy theater, has long been celebrated as the gathering place for tourists and business men from the United States.

Hence those Americans who wanted to go to a theater, had only to step right next door to see "Paddy," and in view of London's much-heralded fog and rain, this was a strong consideration which added to the actual merit of "Paddy—the Next—Best—Thing," carried many Americans nightly into the Savoy theater.

It is all the more coincidental, too, that British producers again turned to America when they wanted this favorite play immortalized on the silver screen, with the result that Mae Marsh went from Los Angeles to London to make what British critics consider the finest characterization ever seen in a film play.

Violence Marks Path of Arctic Traders

[By Associated Press]

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Aug. 7.—Mystery ships plying the Siberian arctic laden with whisky, which is bartered to the natives for furs, still take their toll of murder in the practical traffic, according to Captain Andrew Pedersen here, who says he was recently an innocent member of such an expedition. The limit was actual murder, he says, when the Siberian government attempted to stop the traffic. Captain Pedersen's story follows: "We sailed out of Nome for what I was told would be a trading voyage to Siberia. I will not tell the names of the owners or skipper of the trader, for reasons best known to myself. At one port of call, after getting the natives drunk on moonshine whisky. An official of the Siberian government came aboard to collect a tax and force payment for the furs. He was last seen overboard and shot. The trader said he was clinging to a piece of ice, but I do not know whether he died or was rescued. On the cruise back I heard talk of murdering me because I knew too much. For nights I didn't sleep, and while I rested in the bunk I kept a revolver in my hand ready for action."

DIPLOMA'S BAN CHINA OUTLAWS

SHANGHAI, Aug. 13.—Plans that were set in motion in June by representatives of foreign powers in China included in their scope a sweeping general inquiry, aimed not only at the alleged activities of bandits everywhere in China, but also at that factor so closely allied to banditry, the maintenance by modern mandarins, all independent of external authority, of large bodies of so-called troops.

Lowest in the social scale in China, more despised than the lowly barber or actor, the soldier through the ages has held a degraded place, and, to the people of the nation, the terms "bandit" and "soldier" are synonyms. Therefore, the solemn enrollment as troops of several thousands of Shantung outlaws as a final phase of the recent Lincheng kidnapping affair, after the last contingent of eight foreign captives were set free, held slight significance either for Chinese or for foreigners in China. No one at that time doubted that the new-made troops could revert to type overnight.

Banditry is centuries old in China, and it is only because it has developed serious changes in recent years, changes that directly involve the foreigner, that the necessity has arisen for foreign powers to act.

Perhaps no better authority could be found upon the changing phases of Chinese life in the past two decades than M. Wilden, French consul-general at Shanghai, who has spent a quarter of a century in China, and has traveled on the most remote corners of the country.

Today's political situation in China, says M. Wilden, is worse than it ever has been since the Boxer uprising in 1900. He told of his travels 25 years ago in Yunnan and southern Szechuen, places as far from the seaboard as San Francisco is from New York.

"In those days," said M. Wilden, "we met bandits and robbers, of course, but often we did not know this until afterwards. Foreigners then were regarded as guests, undesirable guests perhaps, but the robbers looked upon them in that light, and so the lives and property of foreigners were sacred."

"I have spent most of my time in western China, where are real paradises for the traveler, where he may find happy days on the road in the remote corners. On the Tibetan border, or in southern Kansu and northern Szechuen, among the aborigines, or in western Yunnan, where all the queer races of the earth seem to have gathered, never did I encounter unpleasantness. Robbers I met many, many times, but in those days the robbers were of the old type who felt that the foreigner must be safeguarded. Those were the days when one's pistol always was forgotten in a box packed on the last mile of the caravan; the day when one's escort when asked why he did not carry a gun, replied: 'As long as we are going with you we are safe.'"

"Times have changed, and I sometimes wonder if we foreigners have not some part of the responsibility. Proud as we are of our civilization, have we not been too quick and too ready to impose it upon people who can quite rightly boast of their own?"

It is because of the change that Consul-General Wilden speaks of that foreign opinion all over China, reflected in expressions of public bodies and in cabled demands of commercial organizations, holds that foreign powers must now act.

Truths in Epigram

Let down the curtain: the farce is done.—Rabelais.

Let us a little permit Nature to take her own way; she better understands her own affairs than we.—Montaigne.

Plato affirmed that the soul was immortal and clothed in many bodies successively.—Laertius.

THE FEAR OF RADICALISM

In a recent discussion among educated men, the subject of radicalism was brought up. The general opinion was that it is far less to be feared than the timid supposes. "Let 'em blow off steam," was the common thought. This process might relieve the feelings of the more truculent, and do no particular harm. Of course the dine had to be drawn. The advocacy of theories repugnant to the senses of the great majority could not be tolerated. For instance, the upholding of free love as a substitute for the marriage relation; the preaching of sabotage, or kindred activities normally regarded as crimes, do not come within the sphere of freedom of speech as created by the constitution. But the man who protests is not of necessity a public enemy or a public menace. On the contrary, in what he says, there may be the grain of a saving truth. Such appeared to be the view of the men in question, themselves to be classed as conservatives.

One quoted Josephus Daniels as having remarked that in religion he wanted only to know what St. Paul would have said, and in politics what Jefferson would have said. Yet these two great individuals were the vaulting and defiant rebels of their time. Daniels, a stand-patter, did not know it. Had he lived in their day he would have been a stand-patter of that day, and regarded both as dangerous characters.

The demand for justice is not a radicalism to be feared. It is the expression of a common desire. There are wrongs in the economic world, and certainly the wish to adjust them has no tinge of crime. There are wrongs in the industrial world. To seek to make them right is highly proper. The small faction that thinks to bring about reform by violence, really may be regarded as negligible. The fruit grower whose product rots on the vine and in the orchard, for lack of demand, does not regard the condition as ideal. Neither does the consumer, who purchasing similar fruits at the store, find he must pay an exorbitant price. Both of them demand a betterment, and hope to bring it about. Neither by this may justly be classed as a radical.

PROPHETS OF EVIL

Reiteration of the prophesy of fresh war in Europe becomes tiresome. When the prophet of evil things essays to give details, his guess loses such impressiveness as otherwise it might possess. When the utter hopelessness of another general war is considered, the absolute certainty that it could lead to nothing but ruin for all concerned, it is possible for the really thoughtful observer to give Europe credit for sanity, and to admit that despite its rancors, it still has the saving grace of common sense.

One of the frequent statements is that Russia and Germany in combination are to undertake to dominate the continent. This could mean only a plot to extinguish civilization. Even the victors in such a struggle, should there be any result suggestive of victory, would have nothing left. They would be as helpless and as futile as the vanquished. But how could the two countries mentioned undertake so great a task as that of destroying themselves and their neighbors? Germany is rapidly approaching the point at which its unity may disappear. Already, to term it a nation, begins to be to flatter it. As a nation it has in large measure ceased to function. Survival is counted as possible yet. Were the Germans to join with Russia in a compact to fight all Europe, whatever injury they might inflict would be shared by themselves.

It is to be remembered that Russia is not a stable government. It is not a government, at all, in the accepted sense of the term, but an oligarchy that sought to put certain theories into practice, and failed abjectly, tragically and completely. The experiments were not workable. So a union of two failures, inspired by the thought of world domination, may be regarded as the dream of foolish ambition, or of groundless fear. People unable to govern themselves are not equipped to extend their jurisdiction at will.

THE $80,000 CLOAK

According to a Paris correspondent, cloaks are being made in that city at a cost as high as $80,000. The statement is added that such garments are for American women, and that extreme cost is a feature demanded by prevailing fashions.

It is possible that the correspondent has been misinformed; possible, too, that American women are being libeled. Faith still abides that they possess better sense, and a finer discretion, than could be indicated by the payment of $80,000 for a single article of wear. Such a price of course would be arbitrary. It would not be based on the worth of material or the expense of manufacture. It would rest solely upon the equation of human folly. The vendor charging such a price would be at the moral level that could be indicated as well by thrusting his hand directly into the pocket of his silly patron.

There are many economic problems to be settled. No suggestion as to settlement of any of them is seen in exhibitions of wanton extravagance. The American who works for his money, and finds the purchase of a comfortable wrap for his wife a severe tax on his income, naturally resents the $80,000 cloak. He resents it particularly because it adorns one of the world's gilded and, save for display purposes, wholly useless loafers. None other would submit to being so decorated.

A person with brains and character would at once perceive the vulgarity, and the danger of spectacular profligacy at a time when millions in the world are hungry, and other millions, conscious of discontent, are murmuring protests. Fear often is expressed of the presence and activity of radicals. An $80,000 cloak invites the presence, and stimulates the activity.

DUTY OF A POLICEMAN

According to Los Angeles papers, the accounts agreeing in essential details, a young policeman of that city is on trial. He is accused of having performed his duty. The charge is that he has abided by the terms of the oath he took to serve the public by upholding the laws. It seems that he so far ignored precedent as to arrest violators of the law without first enquiring if they had a pull. Rashly enough he was guided alone by the circumstance that the law had been broken, and that he had caught them breaking it. Now from official and private sources there come attempts to intimidate him. He is informed that he is a fool, that by using discretion it would be possible for him to make money. Still, the obstinate young chap holds to his principles. It appears that he is not for sale, that the acceptance of bribes is not in his line, but that he intends to do his sworn duty whether or not the course has approval from the outside. He has consulted his own conscience, and has the answer.

One might suppose that this policeman would be backed by every official having to do with administration of justice, with checking crime; that he would be praised for his quickness in grabbing the offenders, and his firmness in holding on. Such does not appear to be the case. The papers are supporting him, which is something. Except for the papers, there is nothing to indicate that he would not be standing alone, and continue so to stand until the invisible power ruling the police department, could throw him out.

Veterans to whom land has been opened for homestead entry should be careful to know something of the acreage before they seek to take possession. On some of the available territory a coyote would starve to death, and a rattler would regard existence as a hardship.

THE CASE OF TRUTH AGAIN

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

One of our prolific producers of words for print has made a comment or so on the desire of the world for truth.

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

The gentleman plays beautifully on the English language, evoking from it sounds that soothe and please, much as one might evoke pleasing harmonies from a cornet, but when he recently said that all the world is seeking truth and waiting only to have it proved before embracing it historians smiled.

They know a bit about the hard sledding that truth has endured; they know, too, that if the world is seeking truth it is not to embrace it but to denounce and rotten egg it.

Truth has always stood at the door of the world knocking and begging for admission. She stands there still while people seek madly here and there, not for truth but for some proof that the things they believe are true.

Does any honest thinker believe that if truth came in bearing her proofs with her that these people would be glad?

They would not. Nothing makes the average citizen more angry than to bring him proof that what he believes is not so. Prove him wrong and you do not convince him; you gain an enemy. Men do not wish to be convinced; they long to be consoled and flattered. They want to believe that the onerous task of thinking is behind and not in front of them.

That is why progress moves through the cycles hobbled.

If proof would make men accept the truth the millennium would be here before the next prize fight.

The glacial fact is that truth will never be accepted until she gets into good society. When any idea secures prestige it is in a fair way to win a niche in the soul of the proletariat.

Because, oh ye who mistake satisfied vanity for the love of truth, we believe what we want to believe and we always want to believe what our betters decree is worthy of acceptance.

So when you come to convince a man do not come bringing proof. Bring instead the blue book of his city and show him the list of those whose bank accounts have hallowed their beliefs. If the thing you are seeking to have him accept has been accepted by the denizens of the blue book, you have only to add repetition and emphasis to that fact and you will presently have a convert, devout as a Mohammedan who has accepted the prophet at the point of the sword—which is very devout indeed it may be seen by a perusal of "The Wars of the Caliphs."

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

THE LETTER OF APPLICATION

When one writes a letter of application for a position with a business house, one is judged to a large extent by the subject matter and the phraseology of the communication.

You are anxious to secure a position. You write a letter on which an employment manager, or possibly a president or another official, is to decide an interview.

In the first place, remember that conciseness is important. A communication, to the point will have much in its favor. Of course the recipient wants to know whether you feel that you are able to handle the work, but he does not want you to waste many words in telling him this. Your simple statement that you are properly equipped together with a necessary statement of your past experience, to substantiate your assertion is all that is required. Leave out superlatives and omit giving the impression that you have an exaggerated ego.

Vocabulary

Constrain means to compel to action or to inaction, by either physical or moral means; urge; oblige; as, Hunger constrained him to eat.

Captain Bill Douglas: "Which is correct, cant or can not?"

Answer: Cant should have been spelled can't, for it is a contraction of can not, or of the preferred spelling cannot. Can't is correct as a contraction and is used frequently in colloquial speech.

J. K. L.: "Is it correct to say, 'a man than whom there is no greater'?"

Answer: Grammatically, the right word is who, but usage has established the expression as correct.

THE LISTENING POST

By JAMES W. FOLEY

The other day we had an article in this space, telling the things that were expected of presidents.

And the accumulation of which breaks them down.

Unfits them for work and destroys their usefulness. Because of mental and physical exhaustion.

That same note is reflected in many newspapers of the country, although after the death of the President.

The article in this place was written several days before the death of the President.

And when it was hoped he might recover. It was intended merely as a note of warning.

Not as a lesson after the tragedy.

Human beings are capable of so much work and no more.

If they are to maintain a state of physical and mental fitness.

Usually we are taught that eight hours of work, eight of play and eight of sleep should form the wise division of the day.

But presidents have come to work eighteen or twenty hours a day.

And much of the work they do ought to be taken from their shoulders.

And done by clerks and subordinates. For the President's duties ought to be merely executive and directory.

Not administrative.

We have friends. And we love them. Or claim we do.

Songs of the Poets

Minnie and Winnie—By Alfred Tennyson

Minnie and Winnie slept in a shell. Sleep, little ladies! And they slept well.

Pink was the shell within, silver without; Sounds of the great sea wandered about.

Sleep, little ladies! Wake not soon!

Echo on each dies to the moon.

Two bright stars peeped into the shell.

"What are they dreaming of? Who can tell?"

Started a green linnet out of the croft;

Wake, little ladies! The sun is aloft.

HOSTILITY TO YOUTH

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THERE are a few human traits that are out-and-out bad. They are naughty, wicked, low and we ought to be ashamed of them, repent in sackcloth and ashes and quit.

Among these, one in particular I wish to point out. It is the feeling of hostility to youth.

It is a sin of elderly persons naturally. It has various degrees; sometimes it is merely a dull resentment, sometimes open sneering, sometimes persistent snubbing, often organized offensiveness.

I am sure I cannot imagine why youth should be despised. There is everything in it to admire. Its bumpiness, forwardness, self-confidence, even its flippancy are off-givings at least of life and force, and not the mean offensiveness of impotency.

The worst thing that can happen a man as he grows old is to fall into a spirit of envy against the younger generation.

When Mark Twain wrote

his story of the Yankee at King Arthur's Court, he made a very deeply penetrating observation when he said he had discovered the reason why the worthies of that time acted as they did, the reason for the extravagancies of chivalry, the cruelty of governments and the brutality of the common life. He says they were all children.

It is only because we are child-minded that we have wars. Russia today is entirely dominated by a lot of grown-up children. It is because France and Germany are supremely childish that they are unable to come together and arrange their difficulties for the benefit of all the people concerned.

We have many hard tasks in this world, but the hardest task of each one of us and the hardest task of every nation and the hardest task of the whole world is the task of growing up.

(Copyright, 1923, by Dr. Frank Crane)

OBSERVED AT A GLANCE

By HENRY JAMES

A question for investigators: If the dead can communicate with the living, why don't they do it?

Motorists don't seem to care how much forest they burn. They are elsewhere before the blaze gets dangerous, anyhow.

Chicago housewives have the privilege of buying melons at $1 each, but have too much sense to be bunked.

The line "To Recognize Mexico Soon" has been used for a year now. Perhaps it is getting to be true.

It is said that an American woman in Paris has paid $80,000 for a cloak. The correspondent is kind enough to suppress the silly creature's name.

The invisible government of the Los Angeles police is being dragged into plain sight.

Australian women object to being officially classed as dependents, an attitude that does them credit.

It is difficult to understand whether Chancellor Cuno speaks for Germany or for Stinnes, who owns most of Germany.

If girls who design breaking into print either as beauties or burglars, would adopt some other name than "Peggy," a tiresome monotony would be broken.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

WORK OF PROPAGANDISTS

[Kansas City Times]

Radicalism's capture of the farmer-labor conference at Chicago and the directing of that organization into channels prepared by Russian communists furnishes a discouraging contrast to the independent and politically wise course of British labor which has consistently defeated every attempt of the European reds to accomplish a like result in that country.

British labor is aware that to accomplish its political program it must adopt the constitutional means provided by the British system, without which no party and no governmental reform can hope to justify itself to the country. As a result of the labor party's recognition of this fact, and of its strict adherence to orderly political methods, it has advanced to the highest strategic position.

But what was seen at Chicago was merely a coup of paid propagandists organized to capture a conference and speak with its voice. The program these filibusters adopted by no means represents the sentiments of the American groups that had assembled to formulate a political and economic program. They were not united, and for that reason were the easier prey. But they were not reds. There is no red party in America—what is red here is foreign. It is noisy because it is paid to be noisy, but its voice is its own, not that of Americans.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

The other day a man 86 years of age waded into the surf at one of the beaches, and permitted the waters to close over him. He had had enough. All his life he had been a wanderer. He had builded no home. He had saved nothing. He had not even formed the sort of friendships that count. At four score and six he was penniless, and there was none to whom he could turn. Of public charity he might have partaken, indeed, he had done so from time to time, but the thought irked him. He had had enough of life, and deliberately he quit it.

A man with the physical stamina to last through eighty-five years must have been competent to earn a living all during his prime. Given his health, and there could remain to him no excuse for the crowning period of desolation that he reached. None will be prone to blame him that he dropped the burden at last. Censure directs itself to the method by which he had permitted himself to become burdened.

It is one of the singular things to be observed, that men of the greatest usefulness often are stricken in the midst of their work, while the useless continue, perhaps tired of the experience, but generally lacking the courage to end it.

The Los Angeles policeman who was a thief in the intervals between periods of duty, presents a case of unusual lack of moral sense. Merely to prey upon society is bad enough, but the rogue who does it in defiance of the police, is a charming fellow compared to the member of the police who also is a rogue.

There is something so despicable about the betraying of trust, the violation of an obligation voluntarily assumed, that it adds to the apparent enormity of the criminal act that follows.

Dr. Sven Hedin expresses the opinion that Henry Ford is the greatest American he has met. The full significance of this may not be grasped in the absence of information as to other Americans met by the gentleman.

Mr. Ford is the greatest manufacturer of flivvers, anyhow. This much will be granted. To just what extent the fact qualifies him for a niche in the temple of fame, may be left for the future to decide.

Motorists are warned to be careful about starting fires. Of course the warning will do not the slightest good. The way to impress them is to catch them setting the fires, take them into court, and soak them to the limit. The motorist uses the highway, which is not subject to incineration, and whether the forests on each side go up in smoke, is nothing in his young life.

Some commentators seem amused that Australian women should resent being classed as dependents. The women are perfectly justifiable in their indignation, in all probability. At least the women of this country would be justifiable in being angry at such classification.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

COMFORTABLE SHOES

The baby class was struggling with the first page of the Little Red Hen. The teacher was insisting that she had found a wheat seed and that the face of the whole world had changed in consequence. At least, for the baby class.

Pudgy Loretta seemed not to care about that seed. In vain did Miss Marie make the lovely picture of the industrious creature scratching among the straws for treasure. In vain she printed Hen and Seed, the Hen decorated with huge red and the Seed with a correspondingly attractive capital of yellow. Loretta gave the performance but a passing cold scrutiny and returned to her own special interest, something that she held in her lap.

Miss Marie went down the aisle to look. Loretta was instantly on the defensive and began bribing the scandalized teacher. "I'll give you a lovely hand-painted vase, Miss Marie. Honest I will! My uncle gave it to me. I'll bring it to you this afternoon. Honest I will!"

Miss Marie choked down the laughter that was always bubbling up in her kindly understanding eyes. "Loretta, aren't you ashamed of yourself. Taking off your shoe and loving it right in the middle of a grand lesson about the Little Red Hen? You'll have to go and sit in Row Six. You're a baby. Taking off your shoe and loving it."

"No, no, Miss Marie. I'm not a baby. I'll do the Red Hen, and I'll bring you that hand-painted vase this afternoon. Honest I will."

"No, Loretta. I can't take hand-painted vases with roses on them from little girls who take off their new shoes to love them. Sit in Row Six." Poor Loretta covered with humiliation slid into Row Six and buried her head and wept, with the shoe in her hand.

"What in the world did she take off her shoe for?" thought Miss Marie. "Of course, it's new and pretty, but then—I wonder."

When the class had been dismissed Miss Marie asked Loretta why she had taken off her shoe to love it. Did she think it was nice for little girls to take off their shoes to love them? Suppose Miss Marie took off her new shoes to love them?

Loretta giggled through her tears. Then she drooped again. "But if they hurted you awful you would take them off."

"O. Show me," said Miss Marie.

Loretta held up a plump pink foot lined and crushed and blistered. "That shoe hurt me awful," she whimpered.

When Miss Marie told Loretta's mother she said, "Goodness. I don't want the child to have feet as broad as a duck's. Can't she stand a little pinch?"

No, she can't. Her feet have to be comfortable first and then they'll be beautiful, never feet. Cramped feet are ugly. When in Italy, friends start on a journey the parting salutation is, "Good-bye. Comfortable shoes to you."

When the little ones start to school, "Comfortable shoes" for them please. They've started on a long journey. They need their feet for the trip, too.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

At decent intervals I take the money I have saved and visit the old home town. It doesn't pay, I find, to make the intervals too far apart. The old friends are apt to forget, or, at least, not to be vitally interested in one's triumphs. Why toot a horn if no one listens?

Anyhow—the foregoing being in the nature of decent confession—on the visit next to the last I was inclined to laugh at the congressman the old town had elected. He was fat, red faced, and wore loose clothes, a wide brimmed soft hat and a black string tie. One looked to see him tuck his trousers in his boot-tops. His eyes were shifty and merry and his smile constant. An unshaken hand aroused a positive passion in him. On the last visit I found he had been replaced by a hard headed, savage, indomitable old man who had none of the graces.

"We got tired of being represented by a professional politician," my friends told me. "So we formed the Black Hand."

That—the Black Hand—is the name given in jest to a voters' club, formed to compel the nomination, if possible, of men of character for congress. If that fails it can at least defeat the most characterless nominee. The members of the Black Hand are men of every shade of politics. They are free to vote for their party nominee, if he is a man of sincerity and courage, but they are pledged to vote against mere vote-catchers.

"We are hand-picked, of course," they told me. "We have publicans, clergymen, editors, union labor men, non-unionists, what-not, in our ranks. We are fairly sure in an ordinary year to defeat the man we are against."

Not many of them agree, I am told, with the present congressman's attitude toward several of the important questions of the day. But they are for him as a congressman because he is a man. He does his own thinking and he is not afraid.

Bully for the old home town.

BROTHERHOOD BIBLE CLASS ATTENDANCE

Maintains Well During the Warm Weather

Attendance at the men's Brotherhood Bible class, which meets every Sunday morning at 9:30 in the council rooms of the city hall, is keeping up remarkably well through the summer season. There has been intense interest in the studies being given by Keith L. Brooks in the Book of Acts. Sunday morning's lesson had to do with the beginning of the second missionary journey of the Apostle Paul and was based upon the 15th and 16th chapters of Acts. Mr. Brooks said in part:

"In the first part of the 15th chapter of Acts, which we studied last Sunday, we considered the great church council held at Jerusalem when the question of the relation of Old Testament ceremonies to New Testament salvation was settled. The council sent a letter to Antioch expressing its decision on points that had been raised. Paul and Barnabas continued at Antioch preaching the gospel for some time before entering upon the second missionary journey.

"During this interval, according to the order of Paul's narrative, occurred the strange conduct of Peter after which Paul felt constrained to openly rebuke the older apostle. This is recorded in Gal. 2:11-21: 'When Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face because he was to be blamed. For before certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles; but when they were come, he withdrew himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision. And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away.' It seems that Peter's old weakness of cowardice cropped out again, so that he practically disowned his recent interest in the protest of the Jerusalem council and disregarded the decision. Influential Jews had put the thumbscrews upon him, and to gratify their prejudices he withdrew from the Gentiles and led others with him. Paul charged that all of them lacked backbone and that they were promoting a divisive spirit at a critical time. Evidently the rebuke was effectual, judging by what Peter later wrote concerning 'our beloved brother Paul.' These temporary defections that sometimes crop out in the lives of great men greatly puzzle us. We should be reminded that even preachers are human. The strongest and most active Christian worker is not infallible.

"The second painful incident followed soon after this. As Paul and Barnabas were making plans for their trip, Barnabas determined to take Mark along and Paul objected for the reason that Mark on a former occasion had departed from them when the burdens were heaviest upon them. The record tells us that the contention became so sharp between them that they departed one from the other and Barnabas took Mark and sailed to Cyprus, while Paul chose Silas and went to Syria. We are sorry they had this altercation, but we should be glad Luke gives us the unvarnished facts. The plain story of imperfections in the apostles indicates that we have an honest and far from perfect record. Peter was far from perfect, and even Paul was not placed upon a pedestal. Men that are called of God do not always get on well together. A little fire kindles a hot blaze. Both were wrong in getting hot in the collar, and this is indicated in the original word for 'contention,' which is literally 'paroxysm.' Yet God worked this all out for good, for He sent out four workers instead of two and opened two fields of labor instead of one. 'Mark was a cousin of Barnabas and Barnabas had a strong desire to have him permanently engaged in Christian work. True, Mark had not stuck to his guns, but Barnabas was willing to give a man another chance in Christian work. It is possible to be so stern as to forget the spirit of the cross entirely. It turned out that Barnabas was right about Mark, for Paul later speaks of him as a valued worker. Those who condemn sometimes turn out to be good helpers. Possibly Paul's distrust of Mark may have helped to straighten him up. There are some modern Marks who need to be jacked up. They have no respect for their engagements. They allow themselves to be counted on, then at the critical time, are conspicuous by their absence. They go not with us to the work.

"Soon after this, Paul had a vision in which he saw a man of Macedonia praying him to come to that country and preach the gospel. Immediately he went in obedience to the vision. Upon his arrival there, he came across a woman's prayer meeting being held on the bank of the river. Prominent in this meeting was a woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira. She was the first to accept Paul and to be baptized with all her household. Thus the man of Macedonia turned out to be a woman and she was not a native of Macedonia, but Thyatira in Asia. The woman was the first convert on European soil, where Christianity was destined to win its greatest victories. That was an epoch-making meeting on the quiet river bank. The gospel stole upon Europe like the dawn and began in a woman's prayer meeting. We should not despise the day of small beginnings.

"Soon after this, Paul experienced his first persecution which came directly from the Gentiles. He had cured a demon-possessed girl who brought great gains to her masters by soothing, and when they saw that their hope of gain was gone, they turned up on him against Paul and Silas and had them thrown into jail. The root of the first antagonism to the gospel in Europe was mercenary. We read that at midnight Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises unto God and the prisoners were listening. Not many birds will sing in a dark cage and jailbirds seldom sing the kind of songs that Paul and Silas sang. Tertullian said: 'The limbs do not feel the stocks when the heart is in heaven.' John Bunyan wrote: 'Though men may keep the bars, yet by faith of God I can mount higher than the stars.' The songs of Zion are never so melodious as when they come from the people of God in adversity. In the very singing of Christian songs the downcast believer finds light springing up in his own darkness.

"Suddenly there was a great earthquake, which shook down the prison doors. The prison-keeper cried out to Paul, 'What must I do to be saved?' The answer was, 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.' On the same page of the Bible we have the record of two remarkable conversions. Lydia, a cultured woman, was saved through the gentle opening of her heart by the Holy Spirit on a quiet river bank. The jailer was saved in the midst of the commotions of an earthquake. Whether cultured Lydia or roughneck turn-of-soul's need is the same. The question, 'What must I do to be saved?' is one that everybody will be asking either soon or late. Paul puts into the brief answer all that is essential to salvation. He demands no doing, but just faith in the person Christ and His redeeming work. The old cause produced the old effect, for immediately upon this man's acceptance of Christ, the voice of God began to work in his heart. He took water and washed the wounds of Paul and Silas. When a man is born again, he will want to wash the stripes he has cruelly inflicted. He will not forget the lives he has injured, the graves he has dug for others. Real salvation drives a man back upon his yesterday. When professing Christians start in to make things right and heal the wounds they have inflicted, the world begins to believe in the church."

"SAUL OF TARSUS" IS THE THEME AT FIRST LUTHERAN

Speaking on the subject of "Saul of Tarsus" Dr. Funk said: "It has been said that a little learning is a dangerous thing; so a little religion is a constant source of trouble to the soul. I know some people who have just enough religion to make them miserable; they row so close to the shore that they can tie up for almost every amusement that takes place on questionable territory. Then there are those who look upon religion very much as they do upon medicine. They take as little medicine these days as they can, which is very commendable; but they take the medicine to keep them from getting down sick in bed, and religion to keep them from going down to hell. Saul was not of this class, for we are told that he was zealous toward God even above many of his countrymen. He was a blasphemer, and yet he was very religious. He was the chief of sinners, yet he lived in all good conscience before God. Such is the testimony of the Apostle Paul concerning Saul of Tarsus."

HARDING SERVICES AT BROADWAY M. E.

Services at the Broadway Methodist church yesterday were of more than usual interest. A beautiful tribute was paid to the life of our late president by the speaker, who read Mr. Harding's favorite passage of scripture—the passage upon which he placed his lips at the time of his inauguration, Micah 6:8, "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

An appropriate prayer was offered in behalf of our sorrowing nation, and divine aid and guidance was asked for our new president. The forty-sixth Psalm was read in unison by the congregation in compliance with Mr. Coolidge's request that every congregation in the nation assembled to worship God, read this Psalm on this day. In the pastor's absence, Rev. J. A. Batchelor of Los Angeles, delivered the sermon and chose for his discourse, John 6:53, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." In eloquent language the speaker delivered a strong sermon, forcefully impressing his audience with the necessity on their part for self-denial, sacrifice and service. These "three words are the key to Christ's own life and teachings. 'Self-denial' is written in the Constitution of Christ's program for His followers, and is necessary if the world is to be evangelized, and we must contribute ourselves to this program. Unless we are willing to spend and be spent for others, our lives will be fruitless. If any cause in this whole world means anything to you, you have got to put something into it, and that something is 'service.'"

A loving tribute was paid to the memory of "mother." Everyone knows that "mother" is the greatest woman that ever lived in this world, and she is great because her life is crowned with service. "Service" makes us great in this present world. God said: "He that would be greatest among you, let him deny himself."

REV. PIERCE IS SPEAKER AT THE NAZARENE CHURCH

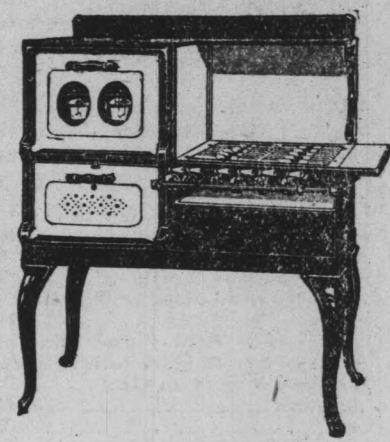

Rev. Robert Pierce of Los Angeles preached at both services of the Nazarene church, Sunday. At the night service, Rev. Pierce preached from the text, "And they saw no man save Jesus only." Special music was provided by Rev. and Mrs. Henry Scheideman.

SALT LAKE PASTOR SPEAKS IN TROPICO

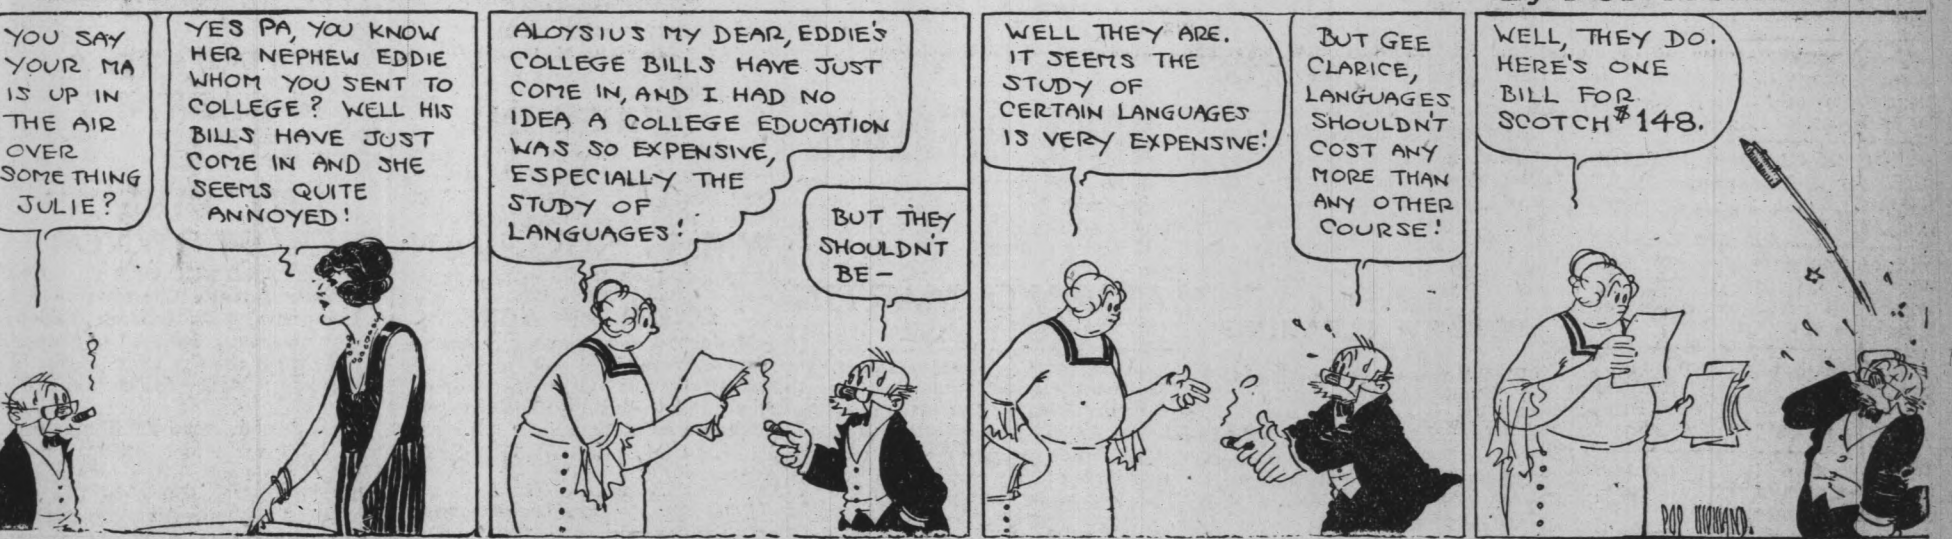

The Tropico Presbyterian congregation had the pleasure yesterday of hearing two fine sermons delivered by the Rev. Wm. H. Ensign, D. D., of Salt Lake City. Dr. Ensign is professor of English Bible in the Presbyterian College of that city and also the pastor of the Salt Lake Presbyterian church. He was a college and seminary classmate of Dr. Winnard, whose pulpit he filled yesterday.

NAZARENE FOLKS HAVE FIRST OF YEARLY PICNICS

The first annual picnic of the Sunday school of the Church of the Nazarene of Glendale, was held at Brookside Park, Saturday, August 11, 1923. No set program had been arranged for the afternoon so the picnicers were free to do as they pleased. One of the main features of the picnic was the lunch which was enjoyed at 6 p. m. After lunch the remainder of the evening was spent in singing and social conversation. The trip homeward was made at 8 p. m. Every one enjoyed the event immensely, according to reports which were made at the close of the day. Saturday's affair was in charge of Rev. Henry Scheideman, the beloved pastor of the church and Mrs. Evans, the popular superintendent of the Sunday school.

"GOOD SHEPHERD" IS REV. KRINGEL'S THEME SUNDAY

"Christ, the Good Shepherd," was the theme selected by Rev. Henry O. Kringel of the Concord Lutheran congregation Sunday morning. It was based on the passages of St. John 10:11-16. The speaker said in part:

"I am the Good Shepherd," says Jesus. He claims that He is the great Shepherd spoken of by the prophets. Jesus Christ is the great central figure of God's revelation. To Him give all the prophets witness, that through His name whoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins. And as Christ is the great central figure in the writings of the prophets, so is He the one great topic of the apostle's speech. St. Paul says to the Corinthians, 'I am determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified.'

"Christ is the great central figure of Christianity also. What is it that constitutes a Christian? It is faith in Jesus Christ. Christ must be our one and all. As the heart is the center of our bodily life, so is Christ the center of spiritual life. Christ is our sole Comfort, our Light in darkness, our Hope in distress, dearest to us in heaven and upon earth, our Treasure, our Wealth and our Joy! Our thoughts center in Christ Jesus as the one great object of our desires. A Christian is a branch on the vine, which is Christ. To begin to be a Christian is to find Christ; to be a Christian is to abide with Christ; to remain a Christian is to hold fast to Christ; to die a Christian is to fall asleep in Christ.

"Christ is our Good Shepherd. Behold the great love of our Good Shepherd to all men, to the fallen human race. The Gentiles in the time of the Old Testament did wrong when they did not come into the fold of Israel and did not join God's chosen people. They have strayed away from the Shepherd's care and went their own ways in superstition and idolatry. But Christ declares that from the Gentiles also He will call His sheep. There are those who, without Christ, without His Word, without His grace, are roaming about in the world without a Saviour.

"He loves even the greatest sinner, loves him because he has an immortal soul which has been redeemed with His blood. When a good shepherd misses a sheep he will search for that lost sheep and spare no pains to find it. And when he finds the poor sheep caught in a thicket and in the hedges, or in some ravine, sore and bleeding, oh how great is his joy to find it! Jesus does the same. If you are a lost sheep, He spares no pains to restore your soul. He calls you with the sweet voice of the Gospel. His voice may reach you and sound in your ears and penetrate to the very depth of your soul when you are ever so far away from Him, upon forbidden paths and in the ways of sin and shame. When you answer His voice and return from the ways of sin and death to your own Good Shepherd, He will save you.

"With gladness He restores you to the fold, and even the angels in heaven sing songs when the sinner comes to repentance and faith in Jesus Christ, who redeemed him with His own precious blood on the cross on Golgotha."

No, m'dear, a man isn't necessarily bright because he shines in society.

WHEN MARY WENT

When Mary went the skies were gray,
And it was such a gloomy day;
Our hearts were heavy and we sighed
For through the great world, far and wide,
Was none like her; life seemed all spent,
When Mary went.

When Mary went, there was no song
About the house the whole day long;
And grief and sadness ruled the place,
With melancholy on each face.
The hearts of all of us were rent,
When Mary went.

When Mary went, it seemed in vain
To hope life would be glad again;
The hours of day moved slowly on,
But brought no joy with Mary gone.
No calm, no quiet, no content,
When Mary went.

When Mary went, whose was the blame
I cannot say; but with a flame
Of anger Mary packed her stuff
And said she'd been here long enough,
And other things were said and meant,
When Mary went.

No juicy roasts, no luscious pies,
No fluffy rolls that rise and rise
With fairy lightness; chicken fried
Nor palate tickling things beside.
And in our hearts is sorrow pent,
Since Mary went.

THE REFINER'S FIRE AND FULLER'S SOAP

Rev. Edmonds preached Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church the last of a series of sermons upon the work of the Holy Spirit in the Old Testament, taking his text from Malachi 3:2: "He is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap."

This prophecy of Malachi is the last message of the Holy Spirit to the Old Dispensation before the long silence of four hundred years preceding Christ's coming. He was a prophet of those exiles who had come back home from Babylon, a reformer to rouse them up from the deep spiritual decline into which they sank. Their restoration after that chapter of punishment had been followed by prosperity, and that now by a falling away from God. How much safer is poverty!

Malachi faced a moral breaking down. The marriage relation was giving way. A mercenary spirit had grown up, even into the sanctuary. Not a man was left to perform his duties except he was paid for it, and men brought offerings or reputation's sake. When they got lower down they cut off their fingers, to cheat God. The poorest lamb was brought instead of the best. Think what vast things God had done for Israel all the way along—and now they insult Him! "You have robbed God," "Wherein?" "In tithes and offerings." Yet God's judgments are tempered with mercy: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, and see what God will do."

That was twenty-three hundred years ago, but all of it is just as true today—the same laxity and breaking down. "Know this also that in the last days perilous times shall come."

I look into this prophecy and see here both comings of the Lord, not yet revealed as separated apart in two. The prophet saw as a great reality the coming of the Son of Man. Among those delinquent people there was a remnant of true hearts looking for their Savior "and they that feared the Lord spoke often one to another—they had prayer-meeting, and the Lord heightened and heard it." Give God His proper place! So few are there ready to give themselves to God's business.

This text about fire and soap is not ambiguous. Soap means a soap experience. Oh yes, you have had a soap and water experience and the outside is clean. But the inside is another thing—the fire, the eating out of all evil, the real purging, so that when the Lord shall come the inner life will be ready. Oh, that we may be refined by the refiner's fire, and when the days of labor are over, then to be with the Lord, and go no more out forever!
